BEIRUT, Oct. 31 (Agencies)

The 1,000-man Saudi contingent attached to the Arab Deterrent Force (ADF) in Lebanon will be reinforced within three weeks, the Saudi ambassador said here Tuesday.

The ambassador did not disclose the strength of Saudi reinforcements.

Earlier this month Saudi troops replaced Syrian members of the ADF in sensitive areas of East Beirut. The move followed a series of clashes between Syrian troops and Lebanese right-wing militias. The ambassador said Saudi

Perez: OPEC in accord on price rise

CARACAS, Oct. 31 (Agencies) — OPEC members are in agreement on the need to raise oil prices, but there is no consensus on the size of the increase, according to Venezuelan talks said unproductive

President Carlos Andres Perez. Perez said Monday his government will not propose a price increase of 20 or 30 per cent at the Dec. 16 meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Abu

"Such an increase by OPEC would have an impact on the world similar to the launching of an atomic bomb," Perez said. He refused to discuss the size of the increase Venezuela would seek at the Abu Dhabi meeting, but newspapers here have quoted government sources as saying Venezuela supports a "moderate increase" of 10 per cent. Perez added that Venezuela did not reach any agreement on a specific price increase during the visit last week of Saudi

Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmad Zaki Yamani. The visit was to strengthen cooperation between the two countries on general policy within OPEC and was not designed to reach a common position on prices before the December meeting, he said. Perez also announced that the Kuwaiti Oil Minister Sheikh Ali Khaiifa Al-Sabah wili arrive in Venezuela within a few days for similar talks. In Kuwait, it was officially announced Tuesday that Sheikh Ali would visit Venezuela and Ecuador in November to continue consultations with OPEC member-states.

In Bahrain, senior OPEC officials said Tuesday the organization is certain to increase oil prices next year, but the rise is likely to be small initially and perhaps staggered.

The sources said the majority of the 13 members are in favor of an increase in excess of 10 per cent while Saudi Arabia, a strong force within OPEC, has informed its partners it is in favor of a small price increase.

The sources said the majority of OPEC states were not likely to accept a small increase since they reckon that their losses from the fall of the value of the U.S. dollar, the currency in which oil is priced, have exceeded 15 per cent over the past two years. Another 17 to 18 per cent fall in purchasing power has resulted from inflation, according to OPEC criteria equated in terms of its member states' trade, the sources added.

Saudi Arabia has suggested that further increases may be spread out throughout 1979, to limit any adverse effect on the U.S. dollar from a large increase on Jan, 1, the sources

But the majority is only likely to accept such an idea if there is a definite commitment at Abu Dhabt to agreed increases at pre-set dates to follow the Jan. 1 rise, they added.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 31 (AP) -- A Ukranian worker defected from the Soviet Union by walking an estimated 600 kilometers through rugged Soviet and Finnish woods in 18 days to reach Sweden, a Swedish newspaper reported

Monday. Viktor Bublik, 32, a woodsman told the afternoon newspaper "Expressen" about the escape which he said occurred last August,

"I am an adventurer," ne was quoted as telling the newspaper. "I love to travel and I do not want to live in a country which one cannot freely leave."

Last spring he took a job as a woodsman near the Finnish border "to be able to scout and prepare myself."

He stopped working in the beginning of June "I had enough money to be able to pretend that I was a tourist and check in at cheap hotels. I also slept under trees in the forests."

He said he bought a compass and a map to train himself at cross country travel and "learned to live like a native of the woods,"

He said he covered 120 kilometers in seven days without incidents to reach the Finnish border Aug. 5.

He added that it was not for Smith to decide on the timing of the election but for Rhodesia's Executive Council — an interim government —

Moroccan plan sees slow growth to 1980

RABAT, Oct. 31 (R) -Morocco plans to invest more in economic development, but expects the growth of its gross domestic product to slow down under the three-year (1978-80) plan being discussed Tuesday by the Higher Council for Planning and National

King Hassan, speaking at the opening of the council Monday, described the plan as an attempt to remedy imbalances caused by heavy government spending on capital-intensive projects under the previous five-year plan (1973-77).

Total investment in the new three-year period will be 33 billion dirhams (about $9 billion) compared with 26.3 biltion in the five-year plan.

The projected growth rate of gross domestic product under the new plan is 4.6 per cent a year, compared to 6.8 per cent a year during the previous plan.

The new plan aims to reduce dependence on foreign aid, cut imports, expand exports to close a chronic tradegap and develop agriculture, which covers only one third of national food needs.

EEC energy policy reported still far off

LUXEMBOURG, Oct. 31 (R) - Common Market energy ministers have reviewed the energy situation in the community but apparently made little progress towards a common policy.

Divergent national interests made a common energy policy difficult. West German Economy Minister Count Otto Lambsdorff told reporters during the one-day meeting here Monday.

French Minister Andre Giraud said after the meeting the problem was that each state tried to defend its own inte-

The community should try to agree on a general policy and see if specific schemes are possible later.

Outlining the new plan, Premier Ahmad Osman said it would continue with major projects started under the previous plan like the opening up of new phosphate mine workings at Khouribga, Ben Guerrir and Meskala, plus the extension of chemical plants at Safi that process phosphate rock to make fertilizers and phosphoric acid. More sugar cane and beet processing plants will be built in the Gharb and Tadla areas and three more cement plants built in Oujda, Temara and Casablanca to cut imports of these two products. In addition ten Pero-industry and mechanical plants will be built by private enterprises.

To boost farm production, nine new dams under construction will be completed work will start on four more, and land under irrigation will be extended by 70,000 hectares.

In his opening speech King Hassan warned that farmers who did not work their land risked being expropriated. He urged them to work it "night and day" to obtain maximum

Dealers worried by U.S. attitude to tin agreement

LONDON, Oct. 31 (AP) - The United States has come under sharp scrutiny from London metal traders anxious to find out whether it will pull out of the international tin agreement if Congress continues to block commitments to the world pact.

The director of commodities in the State Department's Bureau for Economic and Business Affairs, E. Allen Wendt, faced a barrage of questions Monday from the floor at the 12th American Metal Market Newspaper's Annual London

The questions centered around a U.S. pledge to contribute 5,000 tons of tin metal to the International Tin Council's buffer stock.

The buffer stock, which is supposed to buy tin metal when prices fall and resell when they rise in order to stabilize prices, now holds no tin.

It all was sold in a vain effort to prevent prices spiralling to present record levels.

Other questions were on the possibility of the General Services Administration releasing 30,000 short tons of tin to markets from its strategic stockpile.

American indecision has sparked off a spate of contradictory rumors which, in the past few months, have caused sharp price fluctuations destabilizing world in markets, the questions

Shaky dollar rallies FOREIGN EXCHANGE RATER after morning crunch

LONDON, Oct. 31 (R) -The dollar fluctuated on the world's foreign exchange markets Tuesday after another sharp drop in the morning.

As the currency turmoil of the non-Communist industrial world continued, the dollar hit new depths against other major currencies before staging a rally around midday. As a reflection of the confusion and anxiety, the price of gold - the traditional standby in times of currency unrest - soared to a record of $243.65 an ounce.

This fixing price on the London bullion market was the eighth consecutive record and compared with Monday afternoon's previous record price of $242.75 an ounce. The dollar is being hit by a crisis of confidence heightened in the last few days by renewed fears over America's inflation.

On the Tokyo foreign ex-change market it sank to 175.50 yen — its lowest level since World War II — before a late rally pushed it up to 176.05 at the close.

Fears have been expressed on the markets that President Carter's actions to bridle inflation might not be enough. The president called last Tuesday for voluntary cooperation to hold wage increases to seven per cent and price rises to 5.75 per cent, conceding that the plan was no magic remedy for inflation.

Two days later the labor department reported in Washington that inflation had increased

A POTENT MIXTURE

The conference of Arab foreign ministers in Baghdad is winding up and the first signs are very encouraging. The ministers have demonstrated unprecedented positive thinking and objectivity for a big Arab gathering and appear to be on the right track. Instead of indulging in wasteful squabbling and harmful polarization, they have succeeded in juxtaposing their stands if not merging them completely and the mixture should be highly potent.

Admittedly, there is a distinct difference in opinion between the moderate and other (one is tempted to use extremist for simplification but it is not an accurate description) group of delegates over the position vis-a-vis Egypt and President Sadat's peace initiative. Saudi Arabia, the Gulf states, Jordan, Morocco, Yemen and Sudan have counselled against chastizing or punishing Egypt for fear that President Sadat would then be pushed into more extremist stature. Syria, the PLO, Libya, Algeria and South Yemen have demanded the expulsion of Egypt from the Arab League and the moving of League headquarters from Cairo, arguing that President Sadat has already passed the point of no return in his dealing with Israel and that no amount of appeasement will bring him back to the fold. The trouble with the first position is that kindness may be misinterpreted as weakness or division. The trouble with the second position is that any action against the Egyptian government, especially in the economic field, would harm the whole Egyptian people and this is something that must be avoided at all times.

Caught in the middle is Iraq, a country which normally sits at the extreme nationalistic left. Despite its novel centrist position, partly the result of hosting the conference and the desire to make it successful. Iraq is working hard to find common grounds between the divergent views to produce a workable formula for future Arab action. In the end, Iraq's position may be the main surprise of the conference. A country used to upping the ante for over 10 years, it has suddenly plunged in Arab politics in grand fashion and seems to be doing very well.

oring the various countries together are helped by the fact that there is general agreement over the following points:

- The need to treat the situation objectively and soberly. - Support for the confrontation states with money and armis, Rejection of the Camp David agreements in their present form. - Upholding the minimum Arab demands for peace, including full Israeli withdrawal from the occupied Arab territories and recognition of national Palestinian rights. - Efforts to rally international support for the Arab

- Building the power of the Arab nation itself and seeking a solution based on Arab strength not outside forces.

if the heads of state are to be successful, they must be able to find a way to translate the above platforms into positive policy. Their failure will mean that the common Arab cause will face grave danger and the leaders meeting in Baghdad will have no one to blame but themselves.

BAMAKO TALKS

The talks in Bantako between Mauritanian officials and Polisario representatives do not seem to be going as well as they should, at least according to Polisario spokesmen. They charge the Mauritanians are talking the language of their allies in the war, the Moroccans. But this cannot be altogether true since if the Mauritanians were doing that, they would not have been in Bamako exploring peace avenues with their adver-

As a result of nearly three years of fighting in the former Spanish Sahara, three strands of thought have emerged. The first is the demand of the Algerian-backed Polisario for total independence of the desert and, therefore, the complete withdrawal of Mauritanian and Moroccan forces from the territory. The second, diametrically opposed to the first, is the Moroccan belief in its right and that of Mauritania to the terrisory, and anything short of full sovereignty is simply inconceivable. The third strand crystallized shortly after the coup which overthrew Mokhtar Ould Dada and brought the military into power in Mauritania. This view calls for a peaceful solution of the dispute through a dialogue with both the Algerians and the Polisario. The latter have responded favorably by declaring a ceasefire to give the Mauritanians time to marshall their thoughts and present a framework for negotiations. Hence Bamako.

There are some encouraging indications already. Half the adversaries are talking instead of shooting. The other half is watching, at least tacitly approving their endeavor, and so will the rest of the Arab world. It would have been too good to see all four parties to the conflict sit together to discuss a peaceful settlement to this unnecessary war

Mauritania needs peace desperately, and so do the desert people who have been sucked into a war they could do wanout. If the parties to the conflict can find a way to accommodate the desert people-numbering just 60,000 in all-into the body politic of Mauritania with the unstimed approval of their bigger neighbors, then the cause of Arab unity will have been served. The Arab people genuinely aspire to see fewer rather than more Arab states. And here is a historic chance to realize the dream in the western corner of the Arab world.

Facesaving

By Jack Foisie JOHANNESBURG — It's been a year since "Black Wednesday", October 19, 1977, when the South African government carried out its massive crackdown on the black civil rights movement. Eighteen black and white protest groups were disbanded, the major black newspaper was editor Percy Gobo za and 50 other persons were jailed without charges, and several prominent white churchmen and editors were placed under house arrest,

Following as it did closely on the death, while under police interrogation, of the moderate black leader Steve Biko, the heavy-handed action by then Prime Minister John Vorster caused the United States and many European nations to make a "strong diplomatic protest."

Ambassadors were recalled for consultation," consultation staffs were reduced, and the ban on sale of military goods to South Africa were tightened a notch.

Vorster and his Foreign Minister Roelof (Pik) Botha thundered that the West was attempting to interfere with South Africa's internal affairs, and that Western efforts to force revolutionary racial change would only hasten a Communist takeover in all of Africa.

Today, almost all of the official Western gestures of displeasure with South Africa have been relegated to the archives, despite the fact that the 18 civil rights groups are still outlawed and some 20 of the 50 arrested remain in jail without

The country has undertaken some racial moderation that is more the cosmetic change but still does not undo the basic structure of apartheid.

While many liberal whites support social and even economic uplift for blacks, few believe that blacks should be given political equality.

This is the situation in South Africa today — no substantial improvement in life for the South African black. Yet while continuing to denounce apartheid, the Carter administration treads lightly. The tempo was evident in the visit last month of Secretary of State Cyrus Vance with his fellow foreign ministers from Canada, Britain, France and

days of negotiations, Vance was patient and unflappable, holding in check the irritation that arose when the South African delegation, usually headed by Foreign Minister Roelof Botha, stonewalled on issues. The outcome was a vaguelyworded compromise. South Africa would go ahead with its own supervised election in Namibia. The vote will probably result in a temporary pro-South African multi-racial government, with real power wielded by a white rancher, Dirk Mudge,

In its only concession to the foreign ministers, the South African government promised to try persuade Mudge and fellow Namibians to hold further elections, under United Nations supervision, and elect a government which will qualify for international recognition.

This "agreement" is an elaborate bit of facesaving for the West, and for Prime Minister Botha. It could work, but many pitfalls lie ahead. South Africa presently calls the tune in Namibia, and what remains to be tested is whether Prime Minister Botha intends to honor his promise made to the five foreign ministers. Will Mudge be persuaded? Does South Africa want to improve its relations with the West? The next six months should tell.—

Steinstucken is a small area of West Berlin, the shape of a mushroom cap jutting out into East Berlin. About 200 people living there can see the wall around them from every window. Until 1972 their heavy supplies had to be brought in by allied helicopter. and they had only a footpath in a corridor between two lines of the Berlin Wall to link them with the rest of West Berlin. Yet, within the limits of the GDR's xenophobia, progress has been made in easing contact beween the two Germanys, and a new agreement is now being negotiated which must be seen both as an extension in practical cooperation, and as a long-term insurance against fatal cracks in the delicate relations between the Federal Republic and the GDR.

West Germany's permanent representative in the GDR. state secretary Guenter Gaus, is now engaged in the last stages of a complex negotiation that involves primarily a further easing of transit arrangements between the Federal Republic and West Berlin. It will earn the GDR a great deal of hard currency and ease its balance of payments bur-

A new autobahn is to be built in the GDR linking Berlin with Hamburg that will cost over 1.5 billion marks. a ten-year period from 1979. Finally the negotiations should lead to the release by the GDR of blocked savings belonging to old-age pensioners who have moved to the West The Federal Republic will cover these transfers with Deutch mark credits for the West German diplomats believe that these agreements can be completed within the next four to six weeks - unless the GDR, unexpectedly, decides these new links between the two Germanys.

Although cooperation and contact between the Federal Republic and the GDR is already far more extensive than is generally realized, the relationship remains extremely delicate and tenuous and subject to powerful political pr on both sides.

The GDR is caught between the demands of Moscow to devote a larger share of its economic resources to production for the Socialist camp and the effort to improve the GDR's living standards which requires Western technology and more trade with the West.

Trade between the two Germanys has steadily improved and there is plenty of evidence that the GDR feels more comfortable with the Federal Republic as a trading and investment partner than with any other Western country.

In the past few years, travel restrictions to the GDR on West Berliners as well as West Germans have become far less stringent. Latest figures show that there were more than 18 million transit travellers last year and about 6 million visitors, many of them West Berand family.

The GDR is now linked by automatic telephone to West are also involved and will > Berlin and the principal West German cities. Although quite a few intelligence services are able to listen in, this has obviously further reduced the East German's sense of isolation. But the most important link with the West is radio and television. Because of powerful transmitters in West Berlin, the whole of the GDR is able to watch West German television programs, and listen in to West German radio. The GDR makes no attempt to jam these, even though their impact on East Germany is enormous and does incalculable damage to ts own policy of inductrination.

Robert Havemann, the East German dissident who has been condemned to life-long isolation, is now under virtual house-arrest with a 24-hour guard maintained by nearly 200 security agents. The East German authorities do not tell their people anything about this, or about Havemann's disiliusion with the present regime and his old party comrade, Honnecker.

Yet, there is widespread awareness, though seemingly little sympathy, for Havemann's position, because it is all freely broadcast from West Berlin, A tape-recording that he managed to smuggie out has been broadcast twice during the past few days. Extracts from his latest book, published last week in West Germany, have been given prominence. Naturally this aufuriates the GDR leadership.

Honnecker has sought very hard to persuade Havemann to go to the West as other restive intellectuals have done. But he has adamantly refused.

West German leaders of all persuasions carefully watch these developments. But nobody sees any far-reaching changes ahead in the nature of the GDR regime. Nor do any, except the most foolhardy, want to see widespread resistance to it. This could lead only to Soviet intervention and a general hardening of the regime.

On the contrary, West Germans in closest touch with the GDR constantly emphasize the need to build trust and confidence, brick by brick, modestly, and in practical terms. Henry Kissinger's original linkage policy, by which the Communist world was to be so hooked into the West that it could ill afford to make a break, can be practiced more effectively in Berlin than anywhere else. Only if this can be made to work is it even remotely conceivable that serious attention can be given to the division of Germany.

saudi press review

Most Saudi papers devoted their editorials to the Arab foreign ministers' conference in Baghdad. They agreed that the meeting had an encouraging start and augured well for Arab unity. The papers dealt with Prince Saud's address and said that it was frank and to the point, "Al-Rivadh" said that the Arabs could usefully adopt Prince Saud's charted strategy "to rebuild their unity and thwart the enemy's plans." "Al-Nadwa" also referred to Prince Saud's speech and emphasized the importance of "positive and constructive resolutions rather than mere reactions."

"Al-Bilad" said that "all indications seem to point to a successful Arab summit." The paper said that those ministers in Baghdad today "appear determined to approach the issues in hand positively to eliminate differences and paper the cracks in the Arab wall of solidarity." The paper was confident that the summit would be "a new landmark in contemporary Arab

"Al-Medina" commented on the award of the Nobel Peace Prize to Sadat and Begin and said that the award "was a bitter irony." The writer said that splitting the prize was an act of injustice to Sadat because "he was the man who sought peace and worked tor it while Begin tried his best to obstruct the peace process, dictate his terms and perpetuate Israeli domination and expansionism. It is also a miscarriage of justice to equate a man like Sadat with a notorious terrorist

"Al-Medina" also discussed the Mecca-Medina highway which, it said, takes normally four-and-a-half hours to travel, driving carefully. The road is unlighted despite its many turns and twists which can make driving dangerous. It urged the authorities to take the necessary actions. Furthermore, the paper criticized the total lack of any good restaurants along the way "where a driver or his passengers can rest and have a decent meal. The services provided on payment are rudimentary and leave much to be desired. He suggested that the govornment should build moderately sized hotels, light the road and plant trees along it.

One of the writers of "Al-Medina" in another column, drew attention to what he called the "businessmenpilgrims" who arrive in Saudi Arabia-ostensibly to perform the pilgrimage-loaded with goods for sale. The pavements of the airport road, and downtown areas are being turned into open-air bazaars which will very soon drive regular shopkeepers out of business.

"Al-Medina" said that car mechanics have become "rapacious pests."

"Most of them demand SR. 150 in advance of examing a car apart from other expenses. One car owner tried to "test the theory" and visited several repair garages. Each garage demanded SR. 150 in examination fees "before touching the car."

"Al-Medina" also reported that a 75-centimeter long fish fetched SR. 150 when sold by a fisherman to a retailer in Jeddah. "The retailer cut it up into several pieces and sold them separately for a total of SR. 950."

"Al-Jezirah" said that the town of Buraida, to which are attached nearly 300 villages has no maternity clinic or traffic lights. It unged the authorities to attend to this important part of the country.

Riyadh's Japanese Steak House provides a subtle enjoyment

By Joyce Prince RIYADH — If your tastes run to subtlety, aesthetic appearances and traditional ways of serving food, then you will find what you're looking for at the Japanese Steak House here.

Though the intricate serving techniques may make this Japanese foud seem too formidable to be attempted at home, your hunger for the tastes of the Orient comes close to being completely satisfied.

The Japanese Steak House opened two years ago in the Petromin area, just behind Car-tier's. It is owned by Prince Abdul Rahman Ibn Saud and his Japanese partner from Tokyo, Fusazo Nismimara.

Many of the restaurants specialities depend on goods brought in from Japan, Aonoriko, a powdered green mix made from seawoods that is used for seasoning, and spring rain noo-dles used for such dishes as sukiyaki, are two examples.

Ichiro Yasuda, manager of the restaurant, explains: "I work very closely with Mr. Nismimara, who keeps me in touch with our home country.

With his travelling back and forth, he keeps the restaurant well supplied with important ingredients such as pieces and noodles that we bring in from Japan.'

Japanese beef

The Japanese fondness for beef is a relatively new phenomenon dating from the country's embrace of the West after World War II. It now appears as a fairly common dish along with chicken and fish.

Sukiyaki is a dish dating from this recent taste for beef. At the Japanese Steak House, this simmered beef dish is made "exactly as it is done at home," according to the head waiter. You will find yourself relishing every morsel. Masami Nakajima, head-waiter, has been with the restaurant since it opened. In Japan he was a house-boy and cook for a large American family who loved Japanese food and allowed Masami to use all of his Japanese talent in cook-

"I don't do the actual cooking here at the restaurant," explained Nakajima, "but use my expertise in being sure that the intricacies of the one-pot foods are appropriately prepared and served."

The main chef is Akira Aizono, who had been cookingin Japan for ten years before coming to Rivadh. Converted villa

The restaurant is in a converted villa with a wide spacious entry way. An Oriental flair is achieved with lovely hanging paintings of Japanese girls in brightly colored kimo-

The Japanese have a word for anything pleasant and de-lightful — "sappari," which means: "neat, light, and spark-ling with honesty." Even though the restaurant's atmosphere could be a little more oriented towards oriental authenticity, it certainly has an ambiance of "sappari" aboщ it.

A reflection of Japanese sensitivity is displayed at the great attenuon paid to each ingredient's preparation. The French and Chinese tend to blend together many ingredients in one dish. At the Japanese Steak House, the cooks strive to preserve the intrinsic quality of each piece of food, so that each will be equal in taste and арреагалсе.

The delicacies are set apart in serving, and the rooms are as well. There are three main areas: the yellow room (walls of delicate yellow iris) for the Western flair, namely the "steak" cuisine; the green room, specially for those with a Japanese palate and the Oran-ge room for Middle Eastern tlavors.

Yasuda, the manager, feels the people of Riyadh "have accepted our contribution of Japanese food and customs with enthusiasm." The restaurant seats 88 people and many nights the seats are nearly filled. There is a small bar where patrons can sip their favorite soft drink while waiting for their table. One can watch color video tapes of Japanese programs in the lounge area. Japanese lan-terns are tastefully dispersed throughout the dining areas, lending a subdued but pleasant lighting effect.

The menu is adequate and is certainly true that the Japa-

For the gourmet on the run, the sauce is the answer

JEDDAH - You're spending less and less time in the krichen these days, but you still want to turn out a good meal. How to be a gournet without being a slave to the stove?

One way is with sauces. They can be quick, and they can transform the plainest dishes into delectables. A sauce makes a perfect savory garnish, and is a simple ruse when you want to entertain guests with a "lavish" meal on short notice. Seak, chicken, rice, noodles, shrimps, vegetables, just about anything can be enhanced with a sauce.

Ample variety

Mushroom sauce is excellent with steaks and chicken. regetables or plain white rice. Hollandaise, that grand accoutrement, goes well with tish and most other sea foods. Garlic sauce, thick and strong, complements chicken. In addition to serving as a base for almost any other variety, white sauce works well with vegetables. Sauce tartar is served in Europe with raw chopped steak, but it's just as good with the grilled variety or with fish.

Try a few of these sauces and see if you can escape the kritchen to a fine table. These recipies serve one, or two light eaters. Increase the ingredinents according to your needs.

Mushroom Sauce

- I small can mushrooms ounce butter
- I tablespoon flour

1 pint of milk or water, salt and pepper to taste

Slice mushroom and fry with half the butter, then remove mushrooms from the pan. Melt the rest of the butter and add the thour, stirring constantly until the broth turns a smooth, creamy texture. Add milk or water, still stirring, then the mushrooms. Bring to a boil. Boil for one minute, season to taste and serve.

Hollandaise Sauce

- l half lemon
- 2 egg yolks butter (to taste) salt and cayenne pepper

Squeeze the lemon and heat the juice with a spoonful of water in a "bain marie" (a bowl set in simmering water). Add a knob of butter. Whisk in the two egg yolks. Gradually, add more and more butter. When the sauce thickens, remove from heat. It should have a creamy consistency. Season with salt and pepper.

- Gartic Sauce
- garlic cloves 2 spoonfuls mayonaise
- Simple, Pound the garlic cloves and add the mayonaise Sauce Tartar
- I cup mayonaise teaspoon gherkins teaspoon chopped capers

ATLANTA, Oct. 31 (AP) - Tim Mazzetti kicked two field goals and gave the Atanta Falcons a 15-7 National Football League upset victory over the Los Angeles Rams Monday night.

The Atlanta defense blocked a punt, intercepted two passes stopped a fourth-quarter Los Angeles gamble at midfield, and recovered a fumble before each of Mazzetti's field goals. Atlanta, 5-4, moved within two games of Los Angeles in the National Conference West

One minute later the yadh side was in the lead. An attempted clearance cannoned off a defender into the path of Bin Aziza, and the Tunisian striker wasted no time in sliding a left-foot shot the net.

Ai-Nasz continued to press forward with Yusuf Khamis and Abdullah Abdrabbo taking over the midfield. lttihad defense was persistently caught out of position, and looked very susceptible to the long cross-field ball which found the winger in open space behind the defense.

This pattern was maintained after the interval, and it was no surprise when Nasr further ahead in the 52nd minute. Another slip by the Jeddah defense gave Bin Aziza sight of goal and the forward coolly rounded the goalkeeper before slotting home his second goal.

Abdrabbo made ground on the right before swinging a long ball across to Agrabi on the left-wing. The Tunisian's cross was perfectly flighted to the far post and found both Majid and Bin Aziza waiting for the header. It was Bin Aziza who got the final touch to complete his own hat-trick and put Al-Nasr into an unassailable 4-i lead.

Tanzania officials report fighting at Uganda border

31 (Agencies) — Tanzanian and Ugandan forces Tuesday clashed in "heavy fighting" in Tanzania's northwestern province, Tanzanian government sources said Tuesday.

The sources, who requested anonymity, said Tanzania's cabinet was in emergency session Tuesday morning to deal with the crisis and that defense ministry officials had met throughout Monday night.

Fighting was reportedly centered around the town of Bukova about 1.040 kilometers northwest of Dar Es Salaam, the Tanzanian capital.

A senior Ugandan official Tuesday dismissed as absolute nonsence reports of mutinies ın Ugandan armıy units.

"There is no internal trouble. It is absolute nonsense, absolute rubbish. There are no road blocks. Everything is nor mal," the official, a close aide of President Idi Amin, said in a telephone interview from Kampala.

Details of the alleged fighting were not immediately known, but refugees from the area have reportedly said it was still continuing.

Soviet arms aide said transferred to post in Bonn

MOSCOW, Oct. 31 (AP) -Chief Soviet arms negotiator Vladimir Semonovich Semenov will be leaving his Geneva post to become ambassador to Bonn, Western diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

The Soviets have not yet officially announced Semenov's transfer.

Replacing him is his deputy, Viktor Pavlovich Karpov, sources said, but it was not known whether Karpov's appointment was temporary or represented a permanent personnel switch.

Tuesday said refugees from the battle zone reported fighting broke out along the Tanzania-Uganda border over the weekend and that large numbers of Tanzanians were killed late last week at Bukova, when Ugandan jets bombed the town.

Transition to democracy

Spain ratifies new constitution

MADRID, Oct. 31 (R)— The Spanish parliament Tuesday approved a new constitution to seal formally Spain's transition to democracy from the 40-year dictatorship of the late General Franco.

Police went on full alert with helicopters circling above the parkament building and heavily-armed reserves posted in nearby streets to guard against threats of guerrilla attacks which have dogged the constitution's progress through parliament.

Members of the Congress and Senate voted overwhelmingly for the 169-article charter which defines Spain as a parliamentary monarchy with King Juan Carlos as head

Final approval must come from the Spanish people in a referendum due to be held in early December,

The decision was the culmination of 14 months of often bitter debate to draft a constitution acceptable to both left and right-wing parties in Spain's fledging democracy.

In the Congress, its success was evident as Communist leaders Santiago Currillo and the black-suited Dolores Ibcrisply state their "yes" alongside right-wingers such as Manuel Fraga Iribarne of the Popular Alliance.

The final vote was 345 for, six against with 14 abstentions. The "no" votes came from Popular Alliance members and a left-wing Basque deputy.

The Senate voted in favor by 226 votes, with five "no" votes and eight abstentions.
